LEARNING STRATEGY

In language learning it is a way in which a learner attempts to work out the meanings and uses of words, grammatical rules, abilities to speak the language and other aspects of a language, for example by the use of generalization and inferencing.

TYPES OF LEARNING STRATEGIES :

Learning strategies are defined as thoughts or activities that assist in enhancing learning outcomes. Strategies by definition are probably performed with awareness or else they would not be strategic, although the same mental operations can be performed without awareness once they are proceduralized and have the same beneficial result with learning. Three broad categories of learning strategies have been proposed in the cognitive literature. These are :

- a) Metacognitive Strategies : use in planning for learning, monitoring one's own comprehension and production, and evaluating how well one has achieved a learning objective.
- b) Cognitive Strategies : manipulating : the material to be learned mentally (as in making images or elaborating) or physically as in grouping items to be learned or taking notes )through rehearsal organization or elaboration.
- c) Social Affective Strategies : interacting with another person in order to assist learning as in cooperative learning and asking questions for clarification, or using affective control to assist learning tasks.
- d) Metacognitive Knowledge : Understanding one's own learning processes, the nature of the learning task, and the strategies that should be effective.

The application of strategies to learning activities is assisted by what is referred to as Metacognitive Knowledge or knowledge of the task characteristics, of one's experiences with similar task, and of strategies one can deploy in learning new information on the task.
